

THE

EX-FILES

A Crossword Book for Men Who Are Absolutely Fine

Fifteen puzzles. One ex-girlfriend. Zero closure.

Somewhere in here are the things you said out loud at two in the morning, written down as clues so you can finally get them out of your system.

You are not sad. You are themed.

15 PUZZLES · FULL ANSWER KEY · LARGE 8.5 x 11 PAGES

Before we begin

This book is a joke. It is also a real crossword book. It can be both.

Every grid in here was built by hand-writing a themed answer list and then weaving the words together until they interlocked, so every letter you see in a square is doing a job. If a clue makes you laugh and then immediately feel something, that is the intended effect, and you should not worry about it.

The tone is adult: there is swearing, there is drinking, and there is one clue about the group chat that will hit too close to home. If you are buying this for somebody's birthday, congratulations, you have excellent taste and no supervision.

How the puzzles work

These are freeform crosswords. Words run across and down, and they cross wherever they happen to share a letter.

That means some squares are crossed by two words and some are not. Start with the words that cross something, then work outward, the way you would with any crossword.

Every answer is a real word between 3 and 8 letters, and every one of them is checked against the grid before the book is printed. The theme never changes: her, him, the dog, the group chat, and your ongoing recovery.

Numbers in the top-left corner of a word's first square send you to the ACROSS and DOWN lists printed under each grid.

Stuck? Every answer is in the back. Try not to go there in the first hour.

If you finish all fifteen puzzles, you have officially processed the breakup and may now talk about something else at parties.

HOUSE RULES

Ground Rules of the Breakup

Ten rules, written down for your own protection. Tear this page out if you must, but you will want it again by Thursday.

- 1. Nobody in the group chat needs to hear about her sister's wedding. Ever. Again.
- 2. You are allowed exactly one (1) unsent text per month. Draft it, read it, delete it, sleep.
- 3. The dog was always going to go with her. You knew that. You bought the dog food. You knew.
- 4. Do not ask her new man's friends what he does for a living. He is an accountant. Let it go.
- 5. If you say 'I'm fine' with your whole chest at brunch, someone will hand you a drink and change the subject. That is a friend.
- 6. Watching her stories at 2 a.m. counts as contact. You know this. Stop it.
- 7. The gym membership is a tattoo now. It costs the same and it hurts the same.
- 8. You may keep one (1) song. Not the whole playlist. One.
- 9. Never text her mom. Her mom likes you. That is the trap.
- 10. Every rule on this page is negotiable after ten p.m. That is why it is printed here instead of saved on your phone.

THE GROUP CHAT

The Group Chat Glossary

Ten messages you will receive in the next thirty days, translated.

ARE YOU UP

Code for: I need to say something about her immediately, and it cannot wait until morning.

NO WAY

Confirmation that the thing you just said is both true and completely insane.

TOTALLY FINE

The official diagnosis. It is not a compliment.

WE'RE NOT DOING THAT

A plan, vetoed for your own good. Accept it.

COME OUT

Dinner, two hours, one beer, then home. Non-negotiable, lightly enforced.

SHE TEXTED?

The emergency that gets everybody off the couch at midnight.

DRINK WATER

The last message in the thread, always sent at 3:04 a.m., by the one who is awake.

I'M PICKING YOU UP

No discussion, no options, arriving in nine minutes.

NEW GUY

Two words that end a good evening abruptly.

I SAID WHAT

Quote confirmation, sent with a screenshot you do not want to see.

Things You Swore You Would Do

Tick what you actually did. Be honest. Nobody is reading this but you and possibly your brother, who will absolutely tell everyone.

- ☐ Run a marathon (started: a 4k, in October, in the rain)
- ☐ Learn to cook something that is not eggs
- ☐ Delete her number (you still know it by heart)
- ☐ Get the dog back (legally impossible, emotionally necessary)
- ☐ Take up a hobby (bought the equipment, never opened the box)
- ☐ Apologise to her brother (he was fine with it the whole time)
- ☐ Grow a beard (it came in patchy; it has been described as 'moss')
- ☐ Move to a new city (moved apartments, same block, same view of her parking spot)
- ☐ Be friends with her (you cannot, and that is allowed)
- ☐ Be genuinely happy for her (working on it, in the gym)
- ☐ Say one sentence about it without mentioning her name
- ☐ Sleep before one a.m. for four nights in a row

SELF ASSESSMENT

The Scorecard

Fill this in after puzzle 15. Numbers do not lie, and yours are hilarious.

Hours spent thinking about her

Estimated. Add ten percent for shower time.

___ / ___

Texts sent to her

Across any and all apps, including the one you deleted

___ / ___

Unsent drafts written and deleted

The real hero number of the whole breakup

___ / ___

Times the playlist played end to end

If over 40, see a professional

___ / ___

Gym visits claimed / gym visits actual

Be honest. Two numbers, both surprising.

___ / ___

Times you explained the breakup to a stranger

Includes the barber, who did not ask

___ / ___

Songs skipped because they got to you

Count the ones by that band from college

___ / ___

Group chat messages sent after midnight

Roughly equal to the number of bad ideas

___ / ___

Final score: whatever you wrote, add 40 points for finishing the book.

PUZZLE 15 — The Dog Is Fine, By the Way

ONE LAST THING

You finished it.

Fifteen puzzles. You did them. You are, statistically, fine now.

Somewhere around puzzle four you stopped thinking about her and started thinking about a four-letter word for 'the guy she told you not to worry about.' That is growth. That is practically a hobby.

If you laughed even once, this book did its job. If you cried once, that was the postage, and nobody in the group chat needs to hear about it.

Put it on a shelf. Buy a copy for a friend who is going through it. Tell him you found it in a store and thought of him, which is a lie, and also the nicest thing you will do all year.

THE EX-FILES

Crosswords for the recently single, the long recovered, and anyone who needs a gift for a man who is 'totally fine.'
